

A variety of calls have inspired several conversations leading to creative collaboration. St. Patrick's, Kenwood

While Karen Borgfeldt discussed our Lenten-to-Easter plans with her Graphic Design advisor sister, Brian, Karen's husband was priming the paper mache eggs (versus waste generating plastic) to be hidden and hunted in our adult and child, indoor or out "weather dictating" egg hunt part of our Easter Celebration.

Our Mission: To be a community that shares the joy of God's love. EVERYONE is welcome to join us!

A small step in our Creation Care, but wait, there is more: The eggs are being artfully decorated with eager help from the weekly community art group which has been meeting on our campus for over a year.

Coincidentally, or providentially, the art class meeting room heater went kablooeey, right in the winter coldsnap. That allowed the Vestry to accelerate one of the Energy for Purpose Assessment priorities identified and replace the old inefficient model with state-of-the-art ductless heat pumps!! Artists and energy budget were winners!! Clergy experience and support finessed the improvement.

This cohort of creative people includes St. Patrick members like Education Christian Formation Chair Laurie Boone Hogen, Revs.

Karen King and Ed Howell, Property Manager Ron Keith (above), and occasionally yours truly. Instructor Kate Rogers inspires hands and minds to explore connections between self and nature expressing relationships evoking awe and wonder. Hmm?? Sounds divine! For sure an incubator of gratitude.

This same spirit of creative collaboration seasons our Sunday Coffee Hour and all events taking place in Stevenson Hall, our parish meeting center with kitchen. Composting champions Bernadette Gigg and Jerilyn Babbington stand sentinel by our separate containers for trash, recycling and compost. Disposable plastics are avoided whenever possible. We have dish and dishpan-cleaning hands with only mild occasional objections.

Lighting is slated for conversion to LED, as we did in the Sanctuary and parking lots. Closer monitoring of web enabled thermostats manage gas and electricity better. Creation Care and stewardship are congregational mandates. We are learning how to dance to new tunes. The music is different and helps us learn new moves. Listening to each other is giving us fresh perspectives. We are discovering a new creation!!
